The joint resolution was then changed to the form of a bill, and temporarily laid aside to give time for the preparation of an amendment suggested by Mr. Ingalls, permitting much officers to receive pay from the government of Corea.

Mr. Morrill called up the house bill permitting national banks to change their name, location and capital by a vote of two-thirds of their shareholders.

After a long debate, an amendment was made limiting the right of the bank to change its location, so that it shall not change to another state nor to a place more than thirty miles distant from the original location.

He contended that the legislature of Alshama had given manipus independent. of Alabama had given unanimous indorsement to the principle of the bill, and to the bill itto the principle of the bill, and to the bill itself, so far as its essential features were concerned. He denied that the people of the

to the south, but the entire country, from the removal of illiteracy in the south. Among

Mr. George said the house of representatives of his state (Mississippi,) had passed resolutions requesting the United States senators from Mississippi to support this measure. Mississippi was not here, however, as a suppliant for national bounty. It regarded the measure as a generous offer from the northern states toward removing the illiteracy prevailing in the south. Mr. George would be compelled, however, to decline the offer, if he believed it to be unconstitutional. He cited a number of instances in which money

THE HALF-GALLON BILL.

At the expiration of the morning hour the bill went over, and the house went into committee of the whole on the half-gallon tax bill. Mr. Morrison stated that the purpose of the bill was to compel the payment of the tax at the time fixed by law, and at the rate fixed by law on all distilled spirits removed from the distilling warchouses. From 1862 to 1868 the tax had been collected in cash on gallons and fractions of gallons. In 1868 the system of tax had been collected in cash on gallons and fractions of gallons. In 1868 the system of collecting through stamps had been adopted and it having been inconvenient to have stamps for every fractional part of a gallon, it was provided that not only gallons but parts of gallons should pay the fifty cents tax. In 1872, it had been determined not to tax less than a helf gallon at all but to tax over them a helf gallon at all but to tax over them.

EADS' BIG SCHEME

TO DRAIN THE TREASURY OF MIL.

Congressman Crisp, of Georgia, Leads the Oppos n to the Ring-Brunswick's Delegative Visiting the Various Committees-The Weather Convention-Other Notes.

WASHINGTON, February 24 .- [Special.] use committee on commerce agreed today, by a vote of eight to five, to report faday, by a vote of eight to hive, to report la-vorably Reagan's bill giving the guarnty of the United States to thirty-seven millien five hundred thousand dollars worth of bonds in aid of Ead's Teh-uantepec Ship railway. This vote does not indicate the real strength of the scheme in the committee, and is by no means the measure of its chances in the house. O'Neal, of Penn-sylvania, and Johnson, of New York, voted to report the bill favorably, are opposed to it and will vote against it in the house. Their votes changed would make the committee stand seven against to six in favor of the bill, counting those present. Joe Pulitzer is a member of the committee, whose attitude toward this bill is not exactly defined, but as usual he was absent to-day. Pulitzer wears his congressional robes loosely, and rarely noners Washington with his presence.

LED BY MR. CRISP. The opposition to Ead's scheme was led in the committee by Mr. Crisp, of Georgia, who will present a minority report against it. Mr. Crisp has been opposing it steadily. His objections are that it controverts the well estabished policy of our government to keep free from all entangling alliances; that it is charering and guaranteeing a corporation which s to operate in a foreign country. That by so loing the United States pledges itself to maintain the political intregity of Mexico, and that the conditons offered for aid from the United States are inferior to those already conceded to Mexico. According to that agreement the tolls on the proposed ip railway may be paid by Mexican vessels in Mexican silver dellars, while our ships must pay in gold. United States ships of war will not be allowed passage on the railway without the censent of Mexico. Mr. Crisp said tonight that he thought the bill would be defeated in the house, and it is probable that he will lead the opposition to it there as he has in the com-

THE BRUNSWICK DELEGATION.

Messrs. Dart, Dunn and Day, Brunswick's ommittee, accompanied by Congressman Norwood, went before the committee on public buildings and grounds today. They presented statistics showing the remarkable growth in business of that port, and the pressing need or better facilities for the protection of official locuments. The indications point to a favorable report for a public building to cost sevenryive thousand dollars.

THE WEATHER CONVENTION. At the metorological convention today, there was an interesting discussion on the merit of the two systems of weather signals. One of these have been put into use by the national signal office. It requires seven flags. Pat Wiell, formerly of the Georgia agricultural department, but now state metorologist of Ala-hama, has greatly simplified this by perfecting system of his own, which requires only four ags. His system was explained and advocat-d by himself and by Colonel Redding, of the deorgia agricultural department, and will robably be adopted for the miform co-operative work proposed be established by the various lates as auxillary to the national signal ser-Colonel Redding called attention to just uplaints that some of the signal service reorts from the cotton states are inaccurate in that, owing to the improper exposure of the rememeter in summer, they often report too creat a heat. "Why," said he, "I have seen eports sent from Georgia based on such false eservations, which indicated that it was as hot there as it was here or in Ohio." This created considerable merriment. Commissioner Henderson and Colonel Redding are confident that the convention will result in the adoption of a niform system of weather observation and signals, which will prove of great practical benefit.

Mr. Wise, of Virginia, took the floor, and as it was known that he intended to reply to the speech made some time ago by Mr. Brady, of Virginia, the members crowded around him to listen. THE TARIFF BILL.

SECRETARY MANNING EXPOSES ITS WEAK POINTS.

The Net Reductions Proposed Would be Twelve Millions-Deficiencies in the Messure Would Cause Litigation-The Chief of the Bureau of Statistics Writes a Letter, Etc.

WASHINGTON, February 24.—The secretary of the treasury has written to Representative Morrison, chairman of the ways and means committee, in regard to the probable effect had been appropriated from the national treasury to purposes not in any manner enumerated in the constitution, which amounts, if the theory of the opponents of this education bill were correct, had all been unlawfully and improperly paid out. Among the items specified by Mr. George were the following: The purchase of Louisiana territory by Jefferson; the acquisition of Florida; the purchase of Alaska; the payment of several thousand dollars to refund the amount paid by American citizens capturthe passage of the Morrison tariff bill will have on the public revenues. In the letter he says that the net reduction, computed on the basis of last year's importations, would be about twelve million. In regard to the proviso, limiting the maximum of duties to certain ad valorem rates, he says it leaves room for controversy on values, but that the values could be approximately ascertained by the customs officers. He suggests, however, that provision be made by which the valuation of such officers should be made final, and ret leave this invortant conscious to be payment of several thousand dollars to refund the amount paid by American citizens captured by the Anglorian pirates; the appropriation of $50,000 in 1812 approved by President Madison to relieve the people of Venezuela, who suffered from an earthquake. Where did the senators find authority for those appropriations on their theory of the constitution, and where in their view of the constitution, the senators found authority for the sending of ships in 1842 to Ireland, and in 1876, to France and Germany, to relieve the distress in those countries? In 1876 we had given millions of money to a centennial expoand not leave this important question to be, in after years, subjected to the uncertainties of trial in court, with the consequent cost to the people of refunds of duties. The same repeople of refunds of duties. The same remarks, he says, apply to those clauses of the bill which fix the rate of duty according to the value of the article. He calls attention to the necessity of making more clear in some cases, the exact article to which the provisos apply, a troublesome defect in the present tariff law. He expresses the opinion that the provisions in the tariff cets fixing the rate of duty according the tariff acts fixing the rate of duty according to the component material of the chief value, adds to litigation, because of the uncertainty of the meaning of that term when uncertainty of the meaning of that term when applied to manufactured articles. There are a number of suits pending, which involve this question, and in them the secretary fears the government will be defeated. The term carthenware, he says, is also open to misconstruction. In a recent case it has been held to mean only hollow ware, or ware made in a potter's wheel, and if this construction should prevail, glazed tile, for illustration, becomes a non-enumerated manufactured article subject to twenty per cent ad valorem duty. Attention expeditions to explore the north pole; to observe the transit of Venus; to tax the people to educate Indians; to establish and maintain the congressional library; to pay pensions. I am a states rights, strict constructionists democrat," continued Mr. George, "and as my consistency has been assailed on this floor, I mean to prove that I am with the fathers in their construction," Mr. George proceeded to argue at some length, bearing on the influence of precedent on a question of constitutional interpretation, and quoted from President Andrew Jackson's messages, to show that that orthodox demotwenty per cent ad valorem duty. Attention is also called to the uncertainty of the term, broken or granulated rice, and the suggestion and quoted from President Andrew Jackson's messages, to show that that orthodox democrat had found it necessary to change his views of the constitution in obedience to precedents. At five o'clock Mr. George yielded to a motion for an executive session, and the senate, after a few minutes spent in executive session, addiagrand. is made that the maximum size be stated so as to avoid controversy.

The secretary's letter is accompanied by a table prepared by the bureau of statistics, showing the reduction of duty effected by the Morrison bill computed on the basis of imports entered for consumption for the year ended June 30, 1885. This table estimates the de-June 30, 1885. This table estimates the decrease in revenue from wood and wooden ware at $1,080,000, chiefly by transfers to the free lists; on earthen and glass ware, $1,030,000 by reduction of the rates of duty; hemp, jute and flax, $1,805,000 by transfers to the free list, and $744,000 by a reduction of the duties retained; wool and woolens, by a reduction of rates $1,315,000; sundries $1,498,000 by transfers to the free list; and $1,800,000 by transfers to the free list; averaging $500,000 by transfers to the free list; averaging $500,000 by northern part of the territory of Idaho to Washington territory.

In behalf of the committee on railways and canals, Mr. Murphy, of Iowa, called up and the house proceeded to consider in committee of the whole, the Hennepin canal bill. Mr. Murphy spoke in behalf of the bill, and said that wheat raised in the six western states, which were in the neighborhood of the proposed canal could be transported to the seaboard at a saving of 6 cents per bushel. If the government of the United States would do its duty, and construct this canal, the people of the northwest could save 50 per cent over the present rate of transportarates $1,315,000; sundries $1,495,000 by transfers to the free list; provisions $502,000 by transfers and $352,000 by reductions; metals $411,000 by transfers and $323,000 by reductions; sugars $10,177,000 by reductions. Other changes effect a total estimated reduction of $20,171,000. Of the 2.548,000,000 pounds of sugar imported into the United States during the last fiscal test $150,000,000 pounds of sugar imported into the United States during the last fiscal test $150,000,000 pounds.

year, 1,886,000,000 pounds, or seventy-four per cent came from Cuba, Porto Rico, Brazil and British West Indies. These countries, according to the latest advices from the departmen of state, imposed an export duty on sugar. If such is the fact, it is probable that eighty per cent of the sugar imported for last year come cent of the sugar imported for last year come from countries imposing an export duty there-on. This would change the figures in the table of reduction on sugar from $10,000,000 to $2,000,000, and the aggregate reduction of duty from $20,000,000 to $12,000. The from $20,000,000 to $12,000. The imports of articles of timber and lumber named in the bill, as affected by the provise as to export duty, are imported from Canada, which country, so far as learned, imposes no export duty on the articles specified. Therefore the proviso has little or no effect. The chief of the bureau of statistics, in a letter to the secretary of the treasury explaining his computations, says the effect which this bill will have on the volume of imports is a matter of speculation and conjecture, but that the general effect of the reduction in duty is, of course, to increase importation. There are, however, so many elements in the problem that it would be hazardous to venture an opinion on the subject.

NOT SO ANXIOUS FOR EDUCATION. The Negroes Finding Out that They Must Work to Live.

WASHINGTON, February 24.—The national educational association is in session here. Professor James A. Lovett, of Huntsville, Ala., read a paper on "National Aid to Education."
He favored the passage by congress of a bill on this subject, now pending. In the discussion which followed, Representative Willis, of Kentucky, made an earnest speech in advocacy of this measure, taking the ground that congress can lawfully appropriate money or lands for educational purposes. Hon. Theodore Nelson, of Michigan; Hon. B. S. Morgan, of West Virginia, and Hon. H. M. Skinner, of Indiana, took part in the discussion. Mr. Skinner said that during Jackson's administration the western schools received substantial money aid by authority of congress, the right and constitutionality of which was not at that time questioned. S. W. Fenger, of North Carolinas read a paper on the "educational and religion interests of the colored people of the south." He gave an exhaustive review of the actual which followed, Representative Willis, of Ken He gave an exhaustive review of the actual condition of the colored people today and their past history, and from that drew his conclusion as to how they should be educated. He held that their condition was such that it would not be practicable to have mixed schools. The colored people themselves did not want mixed schools, and the white people would not have them. The colored people were not as anxious today to educate their children as they were just after the close of the war. They had learned by experience that they had to work to gain a living, even with an education, and the tendency now was the other way.

FORT WORTH, Tex., February 24.-[Special.] Tomorrow's Gazette will publish an interview with Robert McCarty and City Attorney Capps, who represented the plaintiff and the defendant in the suit for adultery of Mrs. Weaver, of Indianapolis, Indiana, against Peirce Weaver, or J. W. Pierce, as he was known here. McCarty says that from his knowledge of the financial condition of Weaver, he is satisfied that the man at Atlanta is not him, and he says Weaver was very angry at his wife, on account of her prosecution of him for adultery, and thinks that he does not reveal himself for two reasons, at first, because he is willing she shall waste her money in the present suit at Atlanta, and second, because he is still living in adultery with Mrs. Eden, and fears another prosecution. Capps says that Weaver had only fifty dollars whon he left here in the fall of 1884, and that he went to Indian territory to join Mrs. Eden, the woman with whom he lived in adultery here. He says Weaver was greatly infatuated with Mrs. Eden, and that they carried on a correspondence until he was lodged in jail here, and after she had jumped the town to escape arrest. Capps received letters from Weaver about eight months ago, dated Chattanooga, Tenn., stating that he was closely pressed financially, and urged the collection of the claims in the attorney's hands.

Five years ago he forged orders on which he obtained goods was arrested and tried for forgery, convicted and sentenced to nine years in the state penitentiary. Some doubt existed in the minds of many of his old war comrades as to his guilt. There his old war comrades as to his guilt. There sprang up sympathy for him. The members of his old regiment, while contributing of their means for the support of his wife and children, were also actively engaged in attempting to secure his pardon. The governor, having some doubts as to whether Rawls would appreciate clemency, hesitated, but having made an examination of the papers in the case, and it appearing that there were good grounds on which the claims of the prisoner were entitled to consideration, was pardoned, after having served out near ly half his term. In addition to the men who interested themselves in his behalf, there were some prominent ladies, one of whom, on the evening the pardon was obtained, received it evening the pardon was obtained, received it from the governor, and springing into a carriage, drove rapidly to the prison gates with the glad tidings of Rawls's release. Rawls was taken out, was placed in the carriage which was loaded with substantials for the ex-convict's happy wife and children, and was driven to the family and restored to their bosom. Nashville. NASHVILLE, Tenn., February 24.—[Special.] The trial of the gold brick case proceeded to-day, and the entire morning and afternoon sessions were devoted to the examination of Mr. Oscar F. Nall, prosecutor in the case. He detailed circumstantially the event of the swindle, and the detail of the scheme to send the bricks to Philadelphia to have them turned into coin, as heretofore detailed. The evident effort of the defense is to break the force of his testimony by ridiculing Nall, and pander-ing to the feeling against him which exists. They Want the Editors of Punch Brought in Too.

London, February 24.—The hearing in the case of Burns, Hyndman, Champion and Williams, accused by the authorities of having incited the recent riots, was resumed today. The session was devoted principally to hearing the testimony of the newspaper reporters, as to the exact language used by the defendants in their inflammatory speeches. Hyndman, before the proceedings formally opened, entered a complaint against the editor and proprietor of Punch, and asked for their arrest. He alleged they had attempted to excite the public against the defendants, and to prejudice their trial by publishing a picture of "Mr. Punch" in the act of publicly hanging them, in this way suggesting to the people the form of vengeance to indict upon the defendants. The magistrate declined Hyndman's request, saying he had no power to interfere on the ground specified.

Joseph Chamberlain, president of the local government board, and Jesse Colling, member parliament and author of "The Three Acres and a Cow" amendment, on which the conservative ministry were defeated, were present during the latter stages of the hearing. The magistrate, after the reporters had concluded their testimony, announced that he intended to commit all prisoners for trial. Williams' counsel, upon this arose and contended that his client was "outside the indictment," and could not, therefore, be included in the order for trial. The lawyer argued that the words used by his client were not so strong as the language in almost daily use in the press. Pointing to Chambiain, the counses and, "When the right honorable member for Birmingham has employed in the house of commons even stronger language than that imputed to my client, he has been applauded." Hyndman, who defended himself, denied that there was any case against either himself or his companions. He said: "If I am to be condemned on my speeches, then Chamberlain should stand in the dock alongside me." Hyndman also contended that the whole blame rested on the police, who could and should have prevented the rioting.

Mr. Chamberlain consented to be sworn as a witness. When he had taken the oath, Mr. Champion asked him what were the government's intentions with regard to relieving the distress among the unemployed, and whether he himself favored a revolution in the land laws of England.

The magistrate refused to allow the questions, as put, to be answered by the witness.

German Schoolmasters to Be Introduced.

Berlin, February 21.—The lower house of the Prussian diet today discussed the bill relating to the teachers in the national schools in Polish Prussia. Dr. Von Gossler, minister of public instructions and ecclesiastical affairs, decided that the government was compelled to take a firm and clear stand in view of the continuous attacks of the Poles. Leniency and sympathy were impossible. The best way to assimilate the two peoples was to insist upon a common language. It was, therefore, necessary to have the teachers in Poland thoroughly acquainted with German, and to eliminate Polish literature from the schools. Unqualified toachers would be placed in other positions where they would be more useful. No injustice was intended to vested rights. On the contrary the government would pursue a policy of progress; not of retrogression. A long discussion ensued, the conservatives and national liberals supporting and the members of the center party opposing the bill. The debate was finally adjourned april temorrow. the bill. The very probable that the county will go dry. The truth is, the situation here is just as badly mixed as it was in Atlanta.

The peculiarity about the contest in Hall is the plan adopted by the anti-prohibitionists—of no organization whatever. Not a speech has been made nor a committee formed. They are proceeding on the idea that many men will go quietly to the polls and vote the wet ticket if let alone and not forced to ally themselves with that element

John Dean, of Polk county, has been committed to Atlanta jail, in default of a $1,000 bond. Dean manufactured a babbit metal counterfeit of the Bland dollar, and did his work cleverly. He was arrested in Polk, but originally came from Paulding. Mr. Patrick Cooper, a popular citizen of Sheffield, was instantly killed a few days ago. He was engaged in topping a shade tree in his yard, when he was knocked off, fell to the ground, and was so seriously injured by the fall that his death ensued almost instantly.

He was about 33 years of age, and leaves a wife and one child. He was buried at Corinth church, in Walton county.

Wallace Dupree, a colored bootblack of Ro who was sent to the city chaingang, refused to work Monday morning. Officer Jack Wimpee then placed chains upon him, and this riled Wallace so much that he swore he would

A colored girl named Morse, employed as a nurse in a family on Tattnall street, in Savanah, met with an accident that will lay her up for a while and remind her of the folly of being a tom-boy. She climbed a chinaberry tree in the yard of the house where she is employed, and while disporting herself made a miscalculation and fell to the ground. She struck on her right shoulder and dislocated that member, besides having her face and neck scratched and Sunday night the police of Rome arrested a negro woman named Joe Retter Scott. The Scott woman cooked for the family of Mr. Muse, and in her breast there seemed always to be a great yearning for fine dress. Upon the balls and church to-dos she was a regular attendant, and her brilliant plumage was the envy of all the dusky damsels. It finally leaked out that she was not the rightful owner of the dresses and a watch was put upon her. So last Sunday night when Mrs. Hune missed one of her dresses she sent for Policeman Brown, and when the queen of the kitchen made her appearance from church she was pounced down upon. The missing dress was on her, and now for a time she will be given to ponder over the ways of the transgressor.

Considerable excitement was created in Walker county a few days ago, by the ery that a young negro woman named Aun Siler had given birth to a child, and in order to conceal the fact, killed it. An old negro woman who knew of her condition had re ported her suspicions of her friends' virtue and the subject of her talk becoming enrage and the subject of her talk becoming enraged at the slanderous charges, threatened to have her arrested. This aroused the ire of the old woman, and she made public her opinion that the young woman had killed her offspring. She obtained authority to search the ground around the residence of the suspected woman, and after a close hunt the hedy of an infant was found, which had the body of an infant was found, which has been hastily buried. An inquest was held and after an examination of the infant's body by Dr. Fariss, of LaFayette, who gave hi opinion that the child was born alive an healthy, the jury returned a verdiet of fanticide against the woman, Ann Siler, a she is jailed, but was released on a bond of and will be tried this week at the super

This difficulty seems to have started the night before, when Mr. Adams remonstrated with Rans for rocking his cow, and Rans proceeded to rock him. On Saturday morning Mr. Adams's son, Mr. Barney, and Charlie Baker had occasion to pass Rans's house on their way to feed stock. As they did so Rans's wife began abusing Charley Baker. About this time Rans came Charley Baker. About this time Rans came up, and seizing an ax and a rock, threatened the boys and took after them. Jim Land remonstrated with the negro, when he shoved him away with a threat, and made his way towards Mr. Adams, whose son got between them, and the negro struck him with the ax, severely cutting his head, and knocking him down. As he drew the ax again Nat Baker, a boy of nineteen years, who had reached the sene with a shottum, gave the desperado a Charley Baker. About this time Rans cam scene with a shotgun, gave the desperado load of bird shot, shattering his arm and per pering him generally, when he dropper the ax, picked up rocks au began a fusilade on Adams and Bake who returned the compliment and ran the negro in his house. A SOUTHERN SOLDIER'S TRIAL BE-FORE A COURT-MARTIAL.

A Private in an Alabama Regiment Charged With Descrition is Sentenced to be Shot, and After-wards Released—The Cause of His Ab-sence From His Regiment, Etc.

I had the honor once, during the absence of the president, General Brantly, to preside over a continuartial. It was at Dalton in the winter of 1863-4. Among other cases of serious offenses was that of Private Elbert T. Childs, of company B, 34th regiment of Alabama volunteers, charged with desertion in the face of the enemy. The specifications re-cited that he, the said Private Childs, did on cited that he, the said Private Childs, did on the morning of the 21st of September on the battlefield of Chickamauga leave his com-mand, without permission or order of his su-perior officer, and without further permission or order from his superior officer did abandon the service and retire to his home in Chambers county, Alabama. Captain P. S. Wood, of the 28th Alabama, since a preminet judge in that state, was judge advocate. The prisoner, closely guarded was brought in, and to my surprise, appeared a mere boy.

charges and specifications were read and witnesses and specifications were read and witnesses examined. The evidence was and unimpeachable that he did, on the bing of the second day of the battle, quit blace in line and disappear from the field, that when next heard from he was at a in Alabama, where he was arrested by conscript officer and sent under guard back is command. After the indeed accept s command. After the judge-advocate introduced all his evidence, I asked the ner if he had any defense to offer. had introduced all ms evidence, I asked the prisoner if he had any defense to offer. Whereupon he presented a written confession of guilt, and pathetic appeal to the clemency of the court. It was the product of an indiscreet friend, and would of itself have convicted him. The boy was illiterate, and could not understand the damaging nature of the paper. I therefore refused to admit it as evidence against him, but touched by the youth of the prisoner, his frank, open, honest face, and the terrible position in which he stood, I questioned him myself:

"How old are you?"

"I was fifteen last October."

"How came you in the service?"

How came you in the service?"
My father hired me to take the place of 'How came that?'

You see Mr. Martin wanted to go home on a furlough, and his father gave papa one hun-dred dollars for me to come and stay sixty days place.

When was that?"

"When was that?"

"Last spring."

"Well, where is Martin now?"

"At home. You see when the sixty days was out old Mr. Martin gave papa three hundred dollars to let me stay all the time and let Robert go home. I didn't want to do it and begged Colonel Mitchell to let me go home, but the colonel said my father had a right to put me in if he wanted to, and I had to stay."

This was clearly an unlawful enlistment, and should have subjected Colonel Mitchell to a courtmartial, but with that we had nothing

"Well, tell us now, how it came about that you left the company on the morning of the battle:" I asked.

battle?" I asked.
"Well, sir, I'll tell you just how it happened.
You see, that morning we all wanted water;
we had sent our canteens back to Rock springs the Friday before, and I hadn't had a drop to drink since, for you know we didn't take time to drink as we crossed the crick the evening be-fore, so, while we were waiting in line; I ast Captain Rich if I moughtn't run back to the crick and get a drink, and he said yes, but t crick and get a drink, and he said yes, but to make haste back before we were ordered forward. Captain Rich, you know, was killed that day, or he would tell you so himself. Well, I run back as fast as I could, and got the water, but when I started back, the company had started in the fight, and the provose guard picked me up and put me in a squad and marched us ahead with a Louisiana regiment, and we head? years, and am now eighty-four years old. They fight a fore I was wounded on the leg. See, here is the place"—rolling up his pants and showing an ugly sear on the calf of his right leg. "Well, they sent me back to the field hospital and the doctor sent me down to Ringgold, where they put me on the train and sent me down to Atlanta, and from there they sent me to Montgomery, and as the train to Montgomery passed through Notasulga I thought I'd get off and go home. So I got off and Mr. Miller sent me out home in his buggy, It's only two miles, I didn't run away, they all know I was home. Pr. Slaughter tended on me, and as home. tended on me, a home. Dr. Slanghter tended on me, and as soon as I got well Mr. Martin told papa I had better come back, and so I went to Montgomery and reported, and they give me transportation back. Here it is," showing a transportation ticket from the post-quartermaster at Montgomery. "I asked the colonel at Montgomery if I moughtn't stop by home and get my clothes, my mamma was making me a coat, and he said yes, and so I came on to Notasulga and went out home to git out my coat and reand went out home to git out my coat and ra-tions my mama was a fixing for me, and that very night the conscript cavalry came and ar-rested me, and sent me to the conscript camp. When I was reported as a deserter and they tied me and fotched me back here. And that is all I have to say, only that if Captain Rich had a lived I wouldn't a bin in this fix."

There was a straightforward truth and sim-ple sincerity about the boy's story that carried conviction with it, but by no rules of evidence could his statement be admitted. I had the lieutenant commanding his comolled, and he testified to the uniform induct of the prisoner, and also to his I also knew, as did the other members of the court, the truth of so much of his statement as related to the water. The canteens of the brigade had been sent back the Friday before the battle to be filled at Rocky spring, and by some blunder they never came up in time to relieve the thirst before the fight But all this did not relieve the damning fact of his disappearance from the line of battle, and his subsequent arrest at home, without authorized leave of absence, and the judges' advocate, with the legal instincts of a prosecuting attorney, made the case so plainly against the unfortunate boy that I almost greaned to contemplate it. of the court, the truth of so much of his state-groaned to contemplate it.

There was no one to speak for the prisoner, and he was carried back to the guardhouse, and, closing the doors, we proceeded to pronounce judgment.

The charges were voted upon as a whole, the question being, "What say you, is the pusoner guilty or not guilty?"

The junior members of court voted first, and then the rest in order of rank until all had

The verdict was unanimous and the prisoner found guilty. Now, the sentence. A majority, in consideration of the prisoner's youth, and the illegal manner of his enlistment, recommended a ball and chain and work on the fortifications for enlistment, recommended a ball and chain and work on the fortifications for sixty days. Feeling in my soul that the boy was innocent I resolved to try a desperate expedient to save him, and to this end I argued the inadequacy of the penalty to such an offense. If the prisoner is guilty he shall be shot, if innocent he shall go free. "I therefore insist that he be sentenced to be shot to death at such time and place as the commanding general may designate." With what little eloquence I was master of I wrged the matter and carried the point, and accordingly in due form of military law the boy was sentenced to be shot. The judgment was so indorsed upon the charges to which I added:

"In view of the extreme youth of the prisoner, the manifest illegality of his enlistment, his uniform good conduct as a soldier previous to this offense, and the extenuating circumstances surrounding the case I respectfully recommend him to the mercy of the commanding general, praying that the sentence be disapproved and the prisoner remanded for service to his command." It was anxious days and anxious nights until the action of General Johnston could be known, but at last it came. "The findings of the court are disapproved and the prisoner is released and will report to his command."

I went myself to the guardhouse to be the first to tell the boy of his release.

The poor follow had had no intimation of the terrible doom that had been pronounced upon him, but nevertheless it was a joy to see the gladness that shone in his eye as he was told to go. Had he been sentenced to a ball and chain his case would not have been revised by the general, but in the serious matter of life and death the case called for a critical review, and thus by the severity of the sentence a really innocent boy was saved from the ignominy of a disgraceful and degrading punishment.

QUEER ADVICE.

An Old Physician Says Drink Your Whsky Straight.

TO THE EDITOR: In several of your recent issues I have observed the articles of a whisky concern in Baltimore, Md., which, while written from an interested motive, contain some very sensible statements, especially their remarks about so-called bitters, cough syrups, cod liver oil, etc. Now, while I do not agree with these in some respects, still, as to the three mixtures above mentioned, no truer words could have been spoken. Every day in my practice I come across people whose maladies are traceable di-rect to these noxious compounds. Take, for instance, the widely advertised "bitters" of today. In nine cases out of ten they consist of 30 per cent (the amount the government allows) of what is called commercial alcohol;" that is, an alcohol of the vilest and most points. sonous grade, such as is used by plumbers in their lamps, or, in other words, the dregs of the different distillations. The remaining ingredient consist of various foreign substances added as flavoring extracts. These decoctions are consumed principally by the consumptive, the debilitated, the convalescent and others of weak stomachs to whom a stimulant is indisweak stomachs, to whom a stimulant is indispensable, and which irritate and injure the delicate membranes of the stomach. Now, while alcohol, especially in the form of whisky, is the best known stimulant, and is prescribed daily by the profession everywhere, and while whisky and glycerine are the best things for coughs, I can't conceive why people will insist upon taking this alcohol in the form of a decoction or a nostrum. It would be far better if they would take it "straight," as in that form, as these articles state, it passes into the blood vessels direct without digestive effort on the lart of the stomach, and affords more nutriment than any other known substance.

If the concern in Baltimore have discovered a means of distilling an article of the kind they claim—that is, a whisky absolutely pure they claim—that is, a whisky absolutely pure and free from fusel oil (which I very much doubt) they have solved one of the greatest scientific problems of the 19th century—some-thing that has been the source of more inves-tigation among scientists and chemists during the last half century than any other one arti-cle known to the pharmacoposia—and the for-tunate discoverers will have in it a greater monopoly than the larger empiries aperators. monopoly than the larger quinine operators had a few years ago, which latter monopoly is now gradually falling through owing to the great inroads whisky is making on it in the cure of malarial troubles.

OLD PRACTITIONER. Regarding the doubt expressed by the emient doctor as to whether Duffy's pure malt whisky is absolutely free from fusel oil, as laimed by the proprietors, we would say to our readers that the company submits their article to analysis by any intelligent chemist or physician, and it has already been analyzed by the most eminent chemists in the country, such as Mott, Menke, Arendt, etc.—Ed.]

Old Indian Cure.

"The famous medicine, O. I. C., which is manu factured in Perry, is becoming very popular, and the business is growing rapidly. The gentlemen omposing the manufacturing company are well and favorably known for their sterling business qualities and reliability, and their standing is, in itself, a guarantee of the medicine. They could if necessary, fill a newspaper with certificates of its efficiency in the various diseases for which it is ecommended. Some time since, as a mere matt of experiment, we concluded to try the medicine as a tonic aud invigorator, and we were so charmed with its effect upon our system, that we have since recommended it highly. It makes one feel like s new man, builds up the tired and worn out system and purifies the blood. We think we are doing a good work, when we recommend any one to try it.

This preparation is sold by leading druggists. Hutchison & Bro sell it at wholesale and retail in EX-CONGRESSMAN GEORGE Q. CANNON was the politician of the Mormon church. To escape punishment for polygamy he secreted himself, but the government detectives got on his trail and brought him in, assisted by the army. His trial, and conviction quickly followed, and the Mormon elders must begin to think that it is time to repent or flee to the mountains of Mexico. formonism has not suffered a more crushing defeat than it did in the capture and convic tion of Cannon.

THE politicians of Vermont are chin deep in a discussion about biennial sessions of the legislature. The people of that state seem to favor them on the score of economy, while the politicians oppose them, for what reason we know not. But all hands ought to study the history of Georgia under biennial sessions. If the legislature of Vermont is like the legislature of Georgia, the biennial idea will be found to contain the germ of as much extravagance as the annual plan. In Georgia the biennial sessions run into annual ones, and there is no saving. We have as much waste and as much talk as ever.

Free Trade Symptoms.

The New York Star, a very lively New York paper, has been calling attention reto "opportunities at the south." Everything our contemporary says is true. and even truer than it ventures to say. But it is to be borne in mind that its remarks are based on the present condition of affairs. What will be the result of the passage of the Morrison bill no man can foresee. It is a bill that seems to be framed in the interest of New England, whose industries, though they are now no longer infant industries, could not withstand the competition that is threatened in the south.

There is very little doubt that New England interests have had their way in the framing of Mr. Morrison's tariff bill. In this peculiar bill, iron ore is placed on the free list. It is not enough to say that this is the work of Mr. Abraham Hewitt, who runs an iron foundry, and who desires to get the benefit of free raw material; it is, in fact, the work of the New England clique, which, fear that the results of further protection will be to foster formidable competition in the south.

This is what New England desires io avoid, and to carry its point it will go in for free trade if it should find that necessary. It is a fact to be borne in mind here, and we desire to call the attention of southern farmers to it-namely: that the free-trade movement in England was inaugurated by the manufacturers and stoutly resisted by the farmers. This resistance was both logical and instinctive, and the result of it has been that the people of England have been compelled to depend on foreign countries for their food, that the wage-workers are the poorest paid outside of China, and that every interest has suffered except that of the politician.

It is inevitable, if the American policy of reasonable protection to American industries shall continue to prevail, that the south will be a manufacturing section; that its vast deposits of iron ore are to be developed; and that all its wonderful resources are to he drawn upon for the benefit of the people. Especially for the benefit of the farmers. This is the point after all. What will benefit the farmer will benefit every class. The farmers of the south can never enjoy real prosperity until they have such home markets as protection has built up for them in New England and other parts of the north. Without a home market, there is nothing left for him but the all-cotton plan; but with such markets, he would be able by regulating his crops to control the cotton market of the world. The growth of manufacturing in the south which has already begun under the most hopeful auspices, will not only give work and good wages to the laboring people, but will give the farmer the advantage of markets in which nearly everything he can raise may be as readily sold for cash as his cotton. But now we hear from Mr. Morrison and his followers that iron ore is to be placed on the free list. This means, of course, that New England, with Brother Morrison as her champion, is ready to abandon the doctrine of incidental protection, rather than permit the ingland cannot face. Our iron and our coal lie side by side and as the iron industry is the forerunner of all other mannfacturing industries, New England is not ready to allow the south to partake of the benefits of incidental protection. This is the meaning of the free iron ore clause. It is an attack not so much on our iron industries as on the independence of the farming class; for, though our trade be as free as the wind, southern farmers will never reach the prosperity which they deserve to reach until they can reap the benefits of home markets.

The General Appropriation Bills. Nearly three months of the present session congress have expired and only two of the fourteen general appropriation bills have been reported—the pension bill and the Indian bill. The district of Columbia bill and the immediate deficiency bill are ready The committees are said to be vigorously working on the other ten bills, and it may be that there will soon be a deluge of them but at this writing the appropriation bills are very backward.

The short sessions of congress are only three months long, and yet there is ample time in which to prepare the appropriation bills and send them to the president. At the last session, which was the short one of the forty-eighth congress, two appropriation bills were reported in December, seven in January and all but one before the anniversary of Washington's birthday. Only the fortification bill-a minor bill-was reported after February. These facts show that such dilatoriness as congress at present presents is unnecessary.

In the first session of the forty-seventh congress six appropriation bills were reported to the house before the corresponding date, namely, the fortification, postoffice, consular and diplomatic, Indian, military academy and agricultural bills. This included two of the most important bills and nearly one-half of the general appropriation bills. In the first session of the forty-eighth congress the appropriation bills came in more slowly. The navy, military academy and postoffice bills were reported in January. The Indian bill was reported March 29th, and the pension bill March 22d. Five others were reported in April, two in May and three in June. That was the session preceding the presidential election, and the public business was held in abeyance to give the party leaders a chance to make campaign capital.

But doubtless the bills will come in hereafter as fast as the house can act on them It is stated that the committee on postoffices and post roads-of which Mr. Blount is chairman-is ready to report a bill providing for the expenses of the postoffice during the coming fiscal year. The report will cover over fifty million dollars; but there will be no provision in it for subsidies of any kind, and the ocean lines will doubtless show fight over it. Mr. Blount will be heard from it they do. He understands them and is fully ready to discuss their schemes.

Under the new plan the various commi tees charged with the work of preparing appropriation bills are proceeding slowly, but the indications are that the delay will result in carefully prepared bills, and that none of them will be stuffed with items of extravagance. The report of the postoffice committee probably indicates what may be expected from all the rest.

The Vermont Canvass.

The state election in Vermont occurs in September, and in the following month the new legislature will meet and will fill Mr. Edmunds's seat. This fact, together with the fact that there is a presidential bee in his bonnet, explains his tendencies to get up a war between the senate and the administration. He is wholly partisan in such an emergency.

The truth seems to be that the old wheelagainst his will upon the retired list. The Blaine republicans of his state are organizing to defeat his re-election. Close observers do not hesitate to say that, if there is no change in the current, Mr. Edmunds will go out of the senate.

If Mr. Edmunds is defeated for the senate he will cease, of course, to be a presidential aspirant; and a Blaine boom will again begin to disclose itself among the old guard of the republican party. But the crushing in detail of all anti-Blaine republicans will not promote the chances of the Maine historian at the polls. The republicans have evidently reached an era of cliques, and quarrels, and defeats.

Up In a Balloon. Men have made attempts to navigate the air from the earliest times down to the present day, but without any very encouraging degree of success. Some startling experiments have been made with balloons, and during the last siege of Paris, it was demonstrated that the balloon could be made a very useful factor in military operations. But the difficulties in the way of steering these air ships, and keeping them afloat, have, thus far, seemed nsurmountable.

The believers in the practicability of aerial navigation continue hopeful and even confident. At the present time there is unusual activity in testing the various inventions which have been brought forward to solve the problem. In France great things are expected of a cigar-shaped vessel, designed to travel through the upper regions. In the British army some very important experiments are in progress, but they are kept secret. Here in the United States scores of individuals are at work on their own hook, but the most promising effort is one under the auspices of an Illinois company, recently chartered, with a large amount of capital. Admitting the feasibility of the thing, s questionable how aerial transit can be utilized. It seems out of the question to expect the new mode of transportation to combete with freight lines on land and water. n the matter of passenger travel, there are serious objections. What, then, remains for the air ship to do, after its projectors succeed in making it work satisfactorily? It seems to us that its field must necessarily be circumscribed. In the signal service, in military movements, and in exploring expeditions, it may be possible to make the bal loon serviceable. Beyond these limits, the whole business seems literally to dissolve in the air. There is nothing about it sufficiently tangible to invite speculation. A RECENT writer, after wrestling with the cidental protection, rather than permit the south to share in the benefits thereof. Why?

n New England is 1 to every 359 of the population; in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, 1 to every 424, in the middle states, to every 610; in the northwestern states, 1 to very 750; and in the extreme southern states to every 935. Why there should be nearly three times as much insanity in New England as in the south, or nearly twice as much in New York as in the west, is not easy to explain. The craziest corner in the whole country is the district of Columbia, where, without unting cranks and office seekers, there is lunatic to every 189 of the population. The statistics do not bear out the common belief that the increase of insanity is out of all proportion to the increase of population. The fact seems to be that many persons are now considered proper subjects for asylum treatment who were formerly allowed to stay at home as mentally unbalanced but harmles

In London recently the police picked up a little boy and his dog. The boy said that he had no home and no parents, and that for nine cold nights his dog had slept close by his side on the sidewalk. The story got into the papers and affected the people so that five letters were received at the police station offering a home to the dog. Nothing was said about the boy. The youngster was allowed to choose among the applicants for his dog, and after extending this kindness the magistrate sent the friendless child to the workhouse.

The Free Press is mistaken. If Lee had lived he would not have written a line of history. The war great confederate commander regarded the war as one of the saddest and darkest chapters in the anpals of our country. He did not believe in discussing it, and nothing could have been more distasteful to him than the idea of the chief actors in the bloody conflict fighting their battles over again in a magazine. If Lee had lived federal generals might have written what they pleased about him. He would have remained silent, leaving his vindication to the impartial historians who are yet unborn. WHEN Sargeant brought Rhea to this country he had very little money. It was necessa ry to work the star into popularity, and the manager had nothing but his wits to aid him. A rumor was started to the effect that there was a nihilistic plot to prevent the appearance of Rhea, on the ground that she was the favorite actress of the czar. Then a Russian published a card stating that while the actress was in high favor with the czar she had been and to the sick nihilists in the hospitals of St. Petersburg that none of them would harm her. Ali this worked like a charm, and the result was a packed house the first night. The next dodge was to hire a young man to represent a Russian nobleman who was alleged to have followed Rhea to this country. The bogus nobleman sat in the parquette every night and applauded lustily, and all eyes were of course turned to him. By the time this sensation was worn out Rhea had firmly established herself in the good graces of the public

IT is about settled that the queen of Italy is to set the fashions. She is to occupy the place once held by the Empress Eugenie. For sometime past it has been generally admitted that the Italian queen is the best dressed woman in Europe. Her dresses are always becoming, always elegant, always beautiful, but never very costly. It is encouraging to know that a queen has discovered the art of dressing well on a moderate outlay. But there is this point to be considered. The queen is a very beautiful woman. Her beauty heightens the effect of her costume, and she looks well in anything. She does not (like our rich American women) give herself up to French dressmakers She makes it a rule to patronize home modistes, and she wears only materials produced on Italian soil. It is pleasant to think that such a phenomenal woman is to be imitated by our leaders of fashion, and it is to be hoped that her sweetness of manner, her habits of economy, and her charitable disposition will also be copied.

THE STAGE KISS.

As Done First By a Living Firebrand and Second By a Living Icicle. From the New York Sun.

The last time that the beautiful Adelaide Neillson played Juliet in New York she had bade Romeo a lingering farewell and was turning away from the balcony when a sudden whim seemed to seize her, and wheeling about swiftly, she caught his face in both her hands, and, leaned forward, gazed into his eyes. The house was still as death. The audience, already seriously wrought upon, and feeling parched, arid, and uncouth, leaned forward nervously. Two thousand eyes were riveted upon the actress. There was a long wait; then she slowly pressed her lips to Romeo's and seemed lost to everything around her. The people sat like stones. A programme floated down from above and fell athwart a woman's bonnet, and she did not raise her hand to remove it. A spinster coughed. Juliet raised her head slowly and glided away, looking back over her shoulder as she disappeared with an expression that no man who saw it will ever forget. There was a long silence, and then the play went on. But no one paid the slightest attention to it. One by one the people relaxed their strained and intent attitudes and leaned back in their chafts. There was no rustle or noise. The woman did not notice the programme on her bonnet until the curtain fell.

Miss Anderson played Juliet here when she returned from London recently, and in the fourth act she kissed Romeo. As she approached the event the baid-headed man in the orchestra who habitually dawdles with the base viol rose from his seat and looked over the footlights. Everybody knew the kiss was coming, and when the actress leaned forward frigidly and resolutely placed her face in the immediate proximity of Romeo's the house was all attention. She leaned back again. The deed bad been done. The bald-headed man in the orchestra sank back in his chaft, shivered a bit, and turned up his collar. The lights flickered. An usher sneezed, and tip-toeing softly to the door, he put his hand across the crack to see if he could find out where the chilling draught came from. Then a howling swell rose from his seat, blew upon his flingers, puiled on a fur overcoat, went out into Thirteenth street, and wished audibly that he was dead. The audience, already seriously wrought upon, and feeling parched, arid, and uncouth, leaned forward

If she takes a notion half an hour before the cuntain rises that she wants to see her baby, she will travel five hundred miles to do it, and no power can stop her. She is the most selfish woman in some things on the stage. I remember one time she was traveling from Louisville to Chicago. The sleeper she was in broke down, and they had to side-track it. Do you know that woman refused to leave it. She said she had paid for her stateroom in that car, and she would have no other. In vain did the manager protest and entreat. She refused to buge. Finally they got the station agent—a fine looking fellow—brought him in and introduced him as the president of the road, He flattered her, told how much she would oblige him and his corporation if she would only consent to occupy another car, and, at last, pleased at the deference shown her, she consented. But even then they had to lay a Brussels carpet between the cars for her highness to walk on. Gerster is another artist who is very diffi-

Rev. R. W. Bland devoted his sermon last night at the Wabash Avenue Methodist Episcopa church to Sam Small and Sam Jones, for whose ex stence he found 'scriptural warrant in I Corinthi ans, xii. 4. "There are diverse gifts but the same spirit." In reply to a recent editorial in The Her-ald, entitled "Will Chicago Be Born Again:" imputing to the local elergy a confession of the own weakness in calling in the southernjexhorter o redeem the city from sin, Mr. Bland said that the ams were not expected to do the work of the regular ordained pulpiteers. The Sams them regular ordained pulpiteers. The Sams themselves confessed their inability to do so. They were possessed of special gifts which enabled them to touch the hearts of men. "But, mercy!" protested the pastor, "there's an aw-ful lot of work with 'em to do after they're converted." And this humble function of binding up the sheaves brought in by the gifted workers he claimed as his own. Mr. Bland found no flaw in the Sams' lack of conventionality of method: their oddity was their strength. Nor did he find them uncouth or slangy, as certain of the ungodly had charged. On the question of their tobacco chewing he was not so clear. He himself abhorred the narrootic weed, and commended its abhorrence to all his followers. However, he was of southern blood himself, and knew the sway of nicotine on tother side of Mason and Dixon's line. The Sams had grown up in the shadow of a tobacco plant, and lived in a vapor of nicotine. "Twas a mere question of custom and climatic influence. The great Finney himself said that no tea'drinker could be wholly consecrated. The way to cure these men of the tobacco habit was not, Mr. Bland said, to arraign them in the public press, but to pray for them. He recommended that a dozen or so of his church consecrate their prayers for a season to this specific purpose, and he had no doubt that when the spirit of God made it appear to these men that smoking was wrong, they would stop it forthwith.

"It can't be possible," exclaimed a young woman with pink cheeks and sparkling eyes, as she boarded a car near the Chicago Avenue church; "it can't be possible that playing progressive eu-chre is enough to send one to the bad place. Mr. Small says so, but it is very hard to believe. Can it be true?" she mused, and dropped her head as if in a brown study, from which her companion could not easily rouse her. Soon she started up, and her eyes flashed fire as she snapped out words like

"It ain't so, and I know it, so there! I tell you I don't believe it, Sam Small or uo Sam Small. One evening last week we had a progressive euchre party at our house. There were eight young men present, and each one had to pay 50 (cents for the privilege of playing. We girls put in 25 cents apiece, and then we played to see which couple could come out first. The winners had the privilege of sending the 86 with their names attached as a gift to the Foundlings' home, which isn't far from our house. We've done that two or three times and the young men say it's cheaper than playing billiards and more fun, besides, and I don't believe a single one of us will ever go to the bad place for it. And that afn't all, either—sometimes we play when there are no stakes, and I don't believe we'll be punished for that, 'cause it does no harm and keeps the young men away from the saloons. I'd "It ain't so, and I know it, so there ! Mrs. Logan and Mrs. McPherson, wife of the New Jerse Logan and Mrs. McPherson, whe of the New Jersey senator, are the two cleverest women in the circle, each in a different way. Mrs. Logan is the typical western woman and Mrs. McPherson a typical east-ern woman, elever, polished, graceful and brilliant in conversation, Bad health and long absences abroad have kept Mrs. McPherson from being a generally known as she would be were she here all of the time, but when present she is a power and a generally known as she would be were she here all of the time, but when present she is a power and a force quickly appreciated. Mrs. Mahone is a universal favorite, and, besides shining with front of diamonds on grand occasions, shines by her conversation, which is full of humor and originality. Mrs. Mahone always keeps a bubbling of mirth about her, and relates her own experience and describes things and people in a way quite her own. She is an uncompromising American and carried the flag triumphantly through many encounters with the insufferable British tourist during her recent stay abroad. She has a proper scorn for the Europeanized American and his affectations, and a comical story that she once told was of her going to a store or shop, rather, in an English town and innocently asking for crackers. The proprietor hunted through all the shelves and boxes and under the counter, and finally sent the apprentice boy up a ladder and brought down a dusty paper of fire-crackers. Though she had to call a cracker a biscuit for the two years that she was away. Mrs. Mahone is quite the same as ever now that she is in the land where a cracker is a cracker. At Senator Sherman's last night her pale blue satin dress was half-covered with lace, and the front of her square-cut corsage was all a-glitter with the sprays, pins and ornaments of diamonds.

Mrs. Spooner, wife of the Wisconsin senator, who has made a stir lately with his maiden speech and funeral ofation, is another of the very elever women of the group.

The colonel's season of grief was not long. He soon put on his best clothes and showed himself at hog killings and other places of amusement. His friends were shocked, but said nothing. Soon there came into the neighborhood a graceful winder, and was charmed. He called on her. She received him kindly, and eventually they were married.

The services opened by singing:
"All hail the power of Jesus' name,
Let-angels prostrate fall;
Bring forth the royal diadem,
And crown Him Lord of all."
As the notes of the great organ pealed forth, and the vast congregation rose to their feet, and joining n the hymn, the scene was grandly sublime

Rev. Dr. Glenn, the pastor, prayed a most carnest and beautiful prayer, and Mr. Jones asked the con-gregation to join with the choir in singing, "What a friend we inhave Jesus."

Mr. Jones arose and said that he wanted every one to pay strict attention to the verses he had chosen for his text. "There are people who don't know what Christianity is; they don't know how to catch on to it." He then read from the fourth chapter of Philipians:

"Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things."

praise, think on these things."
"Now," said Mr. Jones, "there are people who are always talking about the sentiments of religion. That verse I read tells you exactly what religion is. I know my coat is not Sam Jones, but I

GLAD I'VE GOT A COAT, I couldn't get along very well without one, and I couldn't get along at all without religion. If you want to know what Christianity is we have it right in the verse just read. Let your thorights be pure, good and holy, and forget all I have said before. Fix your mind on what I've got to say now. Think of the words in the text. A good, old-fashioned revival of religion is one of the best things I know of. In the verse just read we have exactly what it is. Methodists love feasts and Baptists experience meetings have been confused with what we have heard. It is not what I feel, what I see and what I hear, as how I act. It is not so much as to how I felt when I was converted as to how I have lived since. Old Bob Ingersoli says that the judge will have a man appear before him and ask: "Did you cheat the Unions and offer the widows and order the widows AND ORPHANS?"

"Yes?" 'Did you belong to the church and pay pew rent?" 'Yes, 'Pass him in and give him aid, give in the verse just read. Let your thoughts be pure rent? 'Yes,' 'Pass him in and give him aid, give him a crown?' Another one comes along and the judge asks: 'Were you a cheater and swindler?' Yes.' 'Lid you attend church regularly?' 'Yes.' 'Pass him in and give him a harp and learn him to play.' Another one comes along: 'Have you lead an honorable upright life, paid your debts?' 'Yes.' 'Belong to the church?' 'No.' 'Tie his hands and cast him into eternal darkness.' Now, this is a libel upon the church, but Ingersoil is about half way right in somethings he says. If he was a Methodist preacher he would be a good one, for he is a worker. What have you done for the church since God converted you? Some of you have done nothing—absolutely nothing. You are not worth the powder and lead it would take to kill you. When you were baptized you said you would lead an honest, pure and upright life. Have you done it? It is better to be a CHEISTIAN THAN A SINNER, a sober man than a drunkard. Then think of these 'Yes,' 'Pass him in and give him aid, give a sober man than a drunkard. Then think of these things. Let your thoughts be pure. What you have thought of today you will do tomorrow. A thought is the result of an impression made upon one of the five senses. An idea is a developed thought, ready to be projected on the great current of life. When I think of this it makes me careful of what I hear, of what I see, touch and taste. Thought is the result of contact. "Evil communication corrupts good manners." That is true saying, and it is proven every day. A man can look at a bouquet of flowers until his whole nature becomes saturated with the aroma. Brethren, think of truth; put your hearts on it and keep it there; live, talk and act it. Many men love to be on the false side. They study and live on that side. I have seen men who had gone on in this way until you couldn't rely upon what they would say. I have seen men who didn't know how to tell the truth. They were consummated, consecrated, continental liars, and they couldn't help it, for they had learned to believe that way. The Bible is a sober man than a drunkard. Then think of these

THE SOURCE OF ALL TRUTHS The man whose heart is fixed on this book, who lives upto the ten commandments, is the man who does not think or do evil. He speaks the truth out of a heart full of truth. No man who has the disposition to tell the truth ever told a lie without ramming a truth back in order to let the lie get out. I may sorry for a man who can't tell the truth when he wants to. I heard of an ite ident which may shook your modesty but I don't care if it does. Truth and Faisehood went in bathing one day, and Faisehood rushed out on the bank and put on Truth's clothes, which he has been wearing ever since. When Truth came out he refused to put on Faisehood's clothes, and said he would go nude before he would wear that garb. Since then we have The man whose heart is fixed on this book, who garb. Since then we have

HAD STARK NAKED TRUTH. truth, and you will speak the truth. Now, you often hear of merchants lying. There are not as many near of merchants lying. There are not as many lies told behind the counters as in front of them. The purchaser will stand there and lie as fast as a dog can trot, about where he or she can buy the some goods at such and such a price. As long as there are ten lies told in front of the counter to one behind, I the merchant who goes to hell for lying will have plenty of company. To be Christians we must go down to the bed rock of truth and plant ourselves firmly there. There are more ways to lie than one. By a simple motion of the hand one can lie. The biggest lie sometimes is when we say nothing in the horselswappers, the

DEVIL IS ON BOTH SIDES.

I don't want to die in a year after making a horse swap. I want twelve monthsof solidprayer. I don't speak from observation but actual experience. The other night I was sitting down thinking how much dishonesty cost the world. It takes one-third of what we are worth to have the rest protected. The police are paid to guard our property from dishonest people. Take a man with plenty of money and let him use it buying Louisiana lottery tickets and he'll steal. Take a man who buys cotton futures, with plenty of money to back him, and let him get without bread and he'll go into the field and hook one ear of corn anyway. Honest money is made by the sweat of the brow, baptized with the very sweat from his head. Let a young buck here win $5,000 out of the lottery and there ain't angels enough in heaven DEVIL IS ON BOTH SIDES.

The poor country lad who plows a week for a silver dollar and comes home, knocks the dirt out of his brogan shoes, puts the dollar in the pockets of his jeans pants and tucks it under the bed, the eagle turns toja nightingale and sings him to sleep. That is honest money. There are young men and old men in this city who don't know what honest money is. This illegitimate meney will be turned to brimstone to burn these men. Some men say it is hard to make an honest living. That may be true, but anything will beat going to hell. It is easier to make an honest living than to go to hell. If you want to make a great deal of money you can't do it honestly. But what do you want with it? I had a man to tell me the other day that his TO SAVE THE SCOUNDREL.

his children. I told him that the best thing he could do was to give me $20,000 for the orphans' home the first time one of them got drunk, and $40,000 the next time, There is nothing like cutting a fellow's rations off. [Laughter.] I know there is a great deal of unnecessary stealing going on; but, sisters, how can you expect your cook to live on six dollars a month unless she steals? While you are paying her that little amount, your husband is paying a boy twehty-five dollars a month to attend to his horse. The Lord will overlook the shortcomings of the cook on that special thing. There is no sense in paying a boy $25 to curry a horse and then give a cook $6 to cook and depend on her stealing the balance. Go into one of the stores and you will find a man behind the counter drawing $60 as how this paying a boy the short of the stores and you will find a man behind the sounter drawing $60 as how thing for the pitful; sum of $1 per week, and if you ask the merchant about it he will say he pays dear for her services. Let me tell you, friends, any country where such business as this is carried on

IS LOOSENING THE BONDS which hold the virtue of our women. It is a fact, and you can't rub it out. I have never been so mad since I got religion as when I read in THE CONSTITUTION of a poor woman making men's garments at since I got religion as when I read in The ConstituTion of a poor woman making men's garments at fifteen cents per dozen pairs. If I could have got to that man I would have licked him. I will pin my elothes on with wire before I wear any garment paid for like that. It is harder for a man to be just than generous. A man huts his wife's feelings, and it is mighty hard to go to her and shell down the corn and ask her forgiveness. You members of the church must change your programme in regard to card tables and entertainments. I heard from an entertainment here the other day which made me sick.

THE DEVIL BAITS HIS TRAP with one grain of corn and some of the members walk right into it. One grain is enough for some of your sort. You won't get me into any such trap. The entertainments of so-called society is the devil's traps. You have promised God to let such things alone. Are you doing it? God will put you in hell for lying, if you den't look out. There is no harm in innocent amusement! The ball room! No man or woman ever got into the Methodist church without promising to let such things alone. I believe in sanctication. It means holiness—w-ho-leness-s-completeness, none of him missing.

Brother Glenn has given me a good report of about sixty members. These members are HITCHED TO A WAGON drawing nine hundred and fifty members. Brother Glenn is on the wagon, and he concludes he must get out and preach. He sees that something must get out and preach. He sees that something must be done. Go to your homes tonight, erect family altars and start anew. Get the cards and burn them, and for the next ten months try to live the lives of Christians. Pray God to forgive you for the sins committed for the past two months. At Cartersville last Sunday I asked everybody to chip in and make Cartersville what she ought to be, and if the dynamiters did come and blow us up we would go to a better land. When Mr. Moody comes, give him a cordial welcome. He will do good work. Take stock, do your part and God will bless you. I thank God there is not a cross sence in the FIELDS OF GRACE.

I cannot stop over. I leave Friday for Chicago—said to be one of the hardest fields. I expect to preach to them just as I have preached to the people on my circuit. I want you all to pray that one hundred thousand souls may be saved. The work in Cincinnait was the greatest I ever saw, and when I left I felt smaller than I ever felt in my life. "Sinking out of self into Christ," I am ready to shout over the fact that "my name is written there." be done. Go to your homes tonight, erect

About the middle of last week he applied for a situation in the shop of Isidore Ruff, a Ger-man blacksmith, but Ruff refused to employ man blacksmith, but hun rerused to empty him, on the ground that he was already under contract with a farmer, as an agricultural laborer. This farmer threatened to prosecute him if he violated his contract. Only a day or two ago first-class unlimited fare to California was $82.15, limited $68,25 and emigrant $43.25. The western roads put down the figures on the portion of the haul that they get, and this is the cause of the reduction in the rates. The rates agreed upon from Missouri points added to the Atlanta rate make the face of the ticket. Commissioner Slaughter will officially announce all California rates in a day or two, provided he is not held back by a further reduction in rates from Missouri points.

CHICAGO, February 24.—The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad withdrew its rebate yesterday. The Union Pacific fell into line and the Burlington and Missouri River's rate to San Francisco of $30, limited first class, and $20, emigrant, became the ruling figures. This again reduced the rate to Portland, Oregon, via San Francisco, be-low the reduction recently made by the North Pacific to the same point. It is the desire of the company to so frame the regulations of the relief department as to make them most satisfactory and beneficial, and it is believed a full discussion will accomplish this result

The Road Completed. The Americus, Preston and Lumpkin rail road has been finished and trains are now running to the depot in Lumpkin. A little work yet remains to be done on the Y and putting in side tracks. The first passenger train as it ran into town was the occasion of much rejoicing. A large number of citizens went out to greet the first train, as it rolled up amid the waving of handkerchiefs and cheers of the people. A rumor is current in railroad circles that the presidents of the Baltimore and Ohio and the Pennsylvania railroads have reached an amicable adjustment, and that they are about to sign an agreement by which the former is to abandon its project of bridging the Arthur Kill and reaching New York harbor by way of Staten island, the Pennsylvania road in turn giving the Baltimore and Ohio the right of way over the former's tracks to New York for the next five years.

From the Philadelphia Call. Miss Coghlan, in the heroine, has a part well adapted to her abilities. She is a powerful actress, and, at the same time, by no means wanting in ability to depict the sweeter qualities of womanhood. At the end of the second act, where she indignantly repels her husband's base accusation and goes off with her brother, she electrified the audience, and the enthusiastic recall was well earned. She was also strong in the rescue scene and as the jealous wife was true to nature.

A Curious Incident of the War.

A Curious Incident of the War.

TROUTMAN, Knox county, Tenn., February 15.—Editors Constitution: Seeing you solicit correspondence from soldiers in our late unpleasantness, will give you a short stery that may interest some of your readers. I took sides with the rebels at the beginning of the war at the age of fifteen. I was captured at Kingston, East Tennessee, in November, 1863, while on picket, and was taken from there to Rock Island, Ill., prison, and remained there until March, 1865, and the amount of dogs that was eaten there during that time I cannot say, but have seen as many as seventeen hides nailed to trees at one time. The dogs would follow the draymen in when they come to clean out the prison, and one was never known to return. Will say nothing about the suffering from hunger and cold while on the island.

One evening in March, 1865, orders came to the prison for five hundred Kentuckians and Tonnesseeans, mostly Morgan's cavalry, to get ready to leave for Dixie on exchange. The joy that filled the hearts of that squad no one can tell—tongue nor pen cannot express it.

Very soon we arrived in Baltimore, was marched up to about the center of the city was haited and fronted for the vast multitude of citizens'to take a peep at, the yankee gnards, of about one hundred strong, was placed on the sidewalk in our front and rear, presently the good ladies of the city appeared with their baskets filled with choics eatables for the prisoners, and asked permission of the officer in charge to feed us, but was flatly denied though one old lady with courage ordered herr sevant to throw a basket to the prisoners, which she did. Imagine how long it took that hungry crew to destroy the contents. There were five loaves and two fishes in the basket. The efficer in charge of the guard being near the good old lady, struck her with his sabre.

five loaves and two fishes in the basket. The efficer in charge of the guard being near the good old lady, struck her with his sabre. Then imagine the feelings of five hundred as good soldiers as any army could produce! Just at that time some one in the prisoners; rank gave the orders for the rear rank to about face forward march, which was as promptly obeyed as a regiment on drill. The officer of the guard ordered his men to charge bayonets on us, but before they could get their muskets brought to bear, we seized them and held them at an angle over our heads, leaving about every fourth prisoner idle for anything else that might come up. Very soon the guard was doubled, coming in double quick on each sidewalk, taking their places alternately with the former guards as they took their stand. We had enough surplus men to manage them and place them in the same fix as their brethren. Strange to say, there was not a gun fired, and everything seemed to be still as death, but vengeance seemed to be still as death, but vengeance was lurking within.

Very soon orders were given by some prisoner in ranks to resume our former positions, which was as promptly obeyed as the first order

It seems at that time, from some cause, there was but few federal soldiers in Baltimore, or the prisoners would have surely been punished for such a daring act; but without further trouble we were marched quietly to steamer on the Chesapeake and set sail for Richmond; was exchanged, but not early enough to take any more part in the war.

ZACK REID'S SUICIDE.-Zack Reid, the ex-ZACK REID'S SUICIDE.—Zack Reid, the ex-policeman who attempted to suicide day before yesterday morning at his home on Decatur street, is improving and is entirely out of dan-ger. Reid, although not expressing regrets for what he did, does not say that he will attempt FOUND DEEP IN THE EARTH.—Yesterday while the workmen were smoothing out Calhoun street at the new culvert a pick unearthed a bowie knife which rust had nearly destroyed. The knife had evidently been buried in the ground a long time. The handle was gone and part of the blade had been eaten away by rust. The knife was found about five feet under the surface of the earth and about twelve feet below the fill made by the railroad track.

THE WIND ENGINE COMPANY .- Mr. M. F. THE WIND ENGINE COMPANY.—Mr. M. F. Amorous, receiver of the wind engine manufacturing company, made a careful examination of the books and accounts of the company yesterday. He says that the liabilities are $13,000 and the assets $16,000, of which about $12,000 are good assets, the remainder being doubtful in character. He says that the company will continue to manufacture boxes, and that the fact of a receiver having been appointed will not at all interfere with its business.

THE WESTERN AND ATLANTIC ACCIDENT. The Western and Atlantic track is clear again. The wreck one mile south of Chickamauga has been cleared away, the track has been repaired and the trains are all moving on schedule time again. Conductor Varnell, who was injured in the accident, is mending nicely and will be able to get out in a short time. The remains of his brother, the train hand, who was killed, were laid to rest yesterday at his old home on the East Tennessee road.

HE WAS IN POLICE COURT .- Bill McKinvon HE WAS IN POLICE COURT.—Bill McKinvon the painter who tried to cut his throat several months ago near the Air-Line shops, because Nora Cook's mother would not allow him to marry her daughter, was arraigned in police court yesterday morning. He was charged with disorderly conduct. The evidence showed that McKinyon had raised a row at Mary Dukes' home on Cone street, and he was fined ten dollars and cost. Mary Dukes was proven guilty of a part in the quarrel and was fined five and cost.

THE BAD ROSE BOYS.—Charley and George Rose have made a bad reputation for them-selves in the chaingang. They are at work at the Dade coal mines and a few days ago made the Dade coal mines and a few days ago made an effort to escape. They had by some means made a hole in the floor of their quarters and were in a fair way to get out when their scheme was detected. Their fellow convicts say the Rose boys had planned to kill a guard and hadmade every effort to induce other convicts to join them in their plan to escape.

THE GENERAL COUNCIL.—The general council will meet in regular session next Monday afternoon. The petition from the railroad companies concerning the gates at the street crossings, will be presented and considered. The report of the mayor and the chairman of the waterworks committee relachairman of the waterworks committee relative to the streams from which Atlanta can draw a water supply, will be submitted, and a communication from the waterworks commission touching the artesian well will be re-

Delivering Bonds.—Yesterday afternoon State Treasurer Hardeman placed in the bands of Mr. Fred Wolffe, of New York, $51,000 of the new bonds. The signing of these bonds is no easy matter, as each bond requires the signature of the treasurer sixty-one times. In consequence of the labor attached it may be secreted as a fact that the transurer realizes. accepted as a fact that the treasurer realizes a feeling of much satisfaction when the work of signing so large a number of bonds is finished. It is said that he signed every bond the re-quired number of times in less than two hours.

LOOKING UP WATER SUPPLY .- Mayor Hillyer, Councilman Kirkpatrick, of the water-works committee, Mr. R. M. Clayton, city en-gineer, and Mr. Howland, a hydraulic engineer from Boston, left the city in buggies for an ex-cursion along the Chattahoochee and its tributaries. Mr. Howland is considered one of the finest experts in water courses in the union, and his views as to the feasibility of certain streams is wanted by the mayor and water committee. The party was out all day and their hunger was appeased by a lunch basket, such as Durand only can make up.

A FIRE YESTERDAY MORNING .- Yesterday A FIRE YESTERDAY MORNING.—Yesterday morning about a quarter of four, an alarm of fire was turned in from box 17, on Peachtree street, and in a few seconds the entire northern portion of the city appeared to be on fire. The department responded quickly to the call and found that the fire was located north of Peters's park. The absence of water from that section of the city made if useless for the exigust to go out but made if useless for the engine to go out, but Chief Joyner and the hook and ladder truck kept on until the fire was reached. The fire was burning a small cottage of Mr. Allen Key's, who is connected with the Baltimore syndicate. The origin of the fire is unknown. The house was almost entirely consumed.

The of the new registered bonds of the state. The bonds will be exceedingly handsome. The face will be printed in black with a border of brown, with the amount of the bonds in large figures, also in brown across the face; a handsome picture of the new state capitol adorns the face of the bond. The back will be printed in green. The bends will be issued for one thousand or five thousand dollars, and will be transferable only in the office of the state treasurer. If one of these bonds is lost, stolen or destroyed, the owner will lose nothing. There have been a number of calls for registered bonds of the state. They bear 4½ per cent interest. state. They bear 41 per cent interest.

The Board of Firemesters.—The board of firemasters met in regular monthly session yesterday. Mr. Stockdell, chairman, and Messrs. May and Green were present. The board passed up the payroll and the incidental expenses of the department for the month of February, amounting to $2,610. Chief Joyner addressed the board relative to the pay in the department, and asked that the monthly salary of the foreman of each company be increased. He showed that the engineer of the steamer companies had been drawing $75 per month, while the foreman had been receiving only $70. This he thought wrong, because the foreman was responsible for his company. The board took the same view of the matter, and increased the pay of the foreman of each company to $75 per month.

THE BRUTAL ASSAULT

ON MRS, TRORNTON TUESDAY

Purifier Details of the Crime How the Darkies In instrupted the Lady on Has Way Home From Her Work-Arrest and Description of the Accused-Other Notes, Etc.

Joe Redan and Tobe DeLyon, the two ne groes who made the desperate and outrageous assault upon Mrs. Mattie Thornton yesterday morning about one o'clock, are still behind the Warrants charging them with criminal assault were sworn out yesterday before Judge Tanner, and this morning they will be given a preliminary trial.

Mrs. Thornton's experience while in the power of the fiends was terrible. For a long time she has been a chambermaid at the Kimball house, and upon many occasions has found it necessary to leave the hotel about midnight, and often after that hour, for home. The walk from the hotel to Mrs. Thornton's home is not a long one; and then it is along the most public thoroughfares of the city. When Mrs. Thornton first essayed these late walks she felt somewhat uneasy, and provided herself with a police whistle with which she could summon help if she needed it, but long ago the uneasiness passed away, and when Mrs. Thornton saw the two negro men standing in front of the Central depot as she approached it she did not feel alarmed. Nearly every night she met or encountered some one on the street, but had never been molested. When the darky spoke to her Mrs. Thornton was not at all scared, and no thought of danger occurred to her until she saw the darkies following her. When she started to run, and Redau.sprang in front of her, Mrs. Thornton thought of the police whistle, and drawing it from her pocket, said:

"Leave me or I'll blow this police whistle."
"Blow and be hanged," said Redan savagely as he grabbed Mrs. Thornton by the agely as he grabbed Mrs. Thornton by the FIDS.

The darky was a powerful one. Mrs. Thornton was but a feather in his hands and the contest between the two was brief. Redan found no trouble in throwing her to the ground. While the contest was going on between her and Redan the other negro, DeLyon, stood quietly by. Noticing his inactivity Mrs. Thornton appealed to him for protection but DeLyon said nothing until she began to scream loudly for help. Then he started to leave and said:

"Joe, leave her alone and come on. You

Joe, leave her alone and come on. You will get into trouble."

Actuated more by Mrs. Thornton's screams than by DeLyon's advice Redan hurried off, and as soon as Mrs. Thornton found herself free she sprang to her feet and ran. Whea near Elliott street she encountered Patrolman near Elliott street she encountered Patroiman Thompson, who had heard the screams and was on his way to ascertain the cause. When Mrs. Thornton met the patroiman she was still badly frightened and stopping on the

"Who's that?"

There was a gas light near by, and the policeman quickly stepped into the light. The rays showed his uniform, and as soon as Mrs. Thornton discovered that a policeman was near her she ran to him and related the story near her she ran to him and related the story of the wrongs heaped upon her. She was terribly excited, and Policeman Thompson found it necessary to conduct her to her home before he could gather anything reliable. There the woman recounted her story, and after being closely questioned gave a description of the men who assaulted her. The patrolman at once sought Patrolman Weoten, who was with him, and together they beggen a search for the darky. In a short began a search for the darky. In a short while they found Redan secreted on the car, and pulled him out. He denied knowing anything about the matter, and went to the city prison without making any confession. On the way to the prison Patrolman Thompson sug-gested that the white man who was in the car might have sent the negroes to stop Mrs. Thornton, and sent Patrolman Wooten back to arrest the man. The patrolman found the man asieep in the car and conducted him to police headquarters. In the meantime Mrs. Thornton had identified Redan, and when Patrolman Wooten walked into the prison with the white man Redan

"Here, this has gone far enough. That white man had nothing to do with it. He never sent me for the woman. Me and Tobe DeLyon were to blame only."

Redan then went on to confess the entire affair, and after telling where DeLyon lived was locked up. This was about two o'clock vectories. yesterday morning, and then Patrolmen Thompson and Wooten started out to hunt for DeLyon. They found him and carried him before Mrs. Thornton. The woman did not know whether he was the darky or not, and

"Let him speak."
DeLyon spoke, but his voice was not satisfactory to Mrs. Thornton and she said: "I can't tell certainly. If he is the other darky he has a match box in his left hand vest pocket. When approached the car he ulled the box out and struck a match-put it

The pocket was then searched and the match box found. This fixed the crime on DeLyon and he was locked up.

Redon has been working for the Central railroad, cleaning up cars in the yard. Ho is a jet black negro of twenty-two years and has a brutal look. He has served one term in the chaingang.

DeLyon is a young mulatto and has never figured in criminal circles. He is about seventeen years of age.

Desaltron Thompson and Wooten, who acenteen years of age.

Patrolimen Thompson and Wooten, who accomplished the arrest, were complimented yesterday on all sides. They are both new members of the force. They are young, energetic and promise to rise in their calling.

DEATH'S DISCHARGE.

A Convict Dies While Efforts for His Pardon are Pending-A Sad Story.

Colonel W. H. Simmons, of Jasper, Pickens county, was in the city yesterday. Colonel Simmons was counsel some years ago for J. Wesley Vandergriff, a man who was convicted in Morgantown on a charge of arson and who received a sentence of ten years in the peni tentiary. It was charged that Vandergriff had a hand in the burning of the noted "Stewart's barn." He has been serving out his term at Lowe's camp at the Chattahoochee river. Disease Lowe's camp at the Chattahoochee river. Disease laid a heavy hand on Vandergriff and he was being borne rapidly to the grave. His wife, who was very poor, went to Colonel Simmons to get his aid in securing a pardon for her husband. The necessary certificates of the man's condition and a long list of citizens asking his pardon were secured and Colonel Simmons offered to come down and see the governor if the wife would pay his expenses. The woman drew out ninety cents, all that she had, and gave it to the colonel, who came woman drew out limety cents, an that she had, and gave it to the colonel, who came down practically at his own expense. On the train he met Dr. Nelms, the physician of Lowe's camp, who informed him that Vandergriff was dead. He had passed out of reach of executive dead. He had passed out of reach of executive clemency. When Colonel Simmons goes back, instead of carrying to the wife the announce-ment of her husband's pardon he will take the news that death wrote the convict's discharge before the governor could pass upon the matter.

The Truck Arrives. The new truck has reached the city. It came in on the East Tennessee yester-day, and was turned over to Chief Joyner and Mr. Stockdell, chairman of the board of firemasters, about noon. In the afternoon the truck was taken off the car on which noon the truck was taken off the car on which it came from Elmira, New York, and hauled to the hook and ladder house, where it now rests. The truck is all in appearance that Chief Joyner has claimed for it, and on parade day would add greatly to the procession. Mr. A. LaFrance, of the LaFrance fire engine company, from whom the truck was bought, is now in the city. He came to Atlanta to surrender the truck to the city and show the department how to manage it. This morning the truck will be given a trial on Marietta street, at Bread. The exhibition will take place at 11 o'clock and promises to be interesting. Mr. LaFrance says that everybody will be thoroughly satisfied with the machine when the exhibition is over. The truck is somewhat heavier than the one now in use and will require heavier horses to move it. Chief Joyner will make a team of a horse now on engine

From the Paulding New Era.

A new grain that will doubtless revolutionize the flour industry of this country is the Brazilian flour corn. It produces from twenty-five to seventy-five bushels per acre, and makes as fine flour as wheat. This is said without the least exaggeration. We have eaten biscuit and pound-cake made of the flour. The corn was ground on a country mill and bolted just as wheat, and it is in every way as good as any wheat flour-beside, fifty-six pounds of the Brazilian flour corn will yield fifty pounds of fine white flour. There is millions in it for this country and corn will yield fifty pounds of fine white flour. There is millions in it for this country, and farmers should not be slow to try it. When you can produce on your own land fifty pounds of fine flour for thirty cents, why pay the northwest $1.50 for the same quality of flour? The Brazilian flour corn is destined to save us billions, and Professor F. M. Duncan and others who have introduced it will justly be entitled to the gratitude and thankfulness of twenty millions of southern people.

The average production of wheat in north Georgia is about four and one-half bushels per acre, or about 160 pounds of good flour per acre. The Brazilian corn will yield thirty bushels of grain, or from 1,200 to 1,500 pounds of flour. That is about eighty times as much flour as can be raised on an acre sown in wheat.
F. M. Duncan, of Dallas, Ga., will send one pound, post paid, of this corn, to any address in the United States for forty cents.

ORGANIZED AND AT WORK.

Ladies of the Home Organize the Woman's Christian Association.

The ladies have been doing good work at the home for women and girls, 147 Marietta street, this week. The above named association has been organized, under whose management the work of the association will be conducted. There has been no change made in the superintendents of the different departments of the home. All are in perfect harmony. Yesterday the constitution for the association was presented by the committee who had the work in charge, and adopted. It provides for a president, secretary and treasurer, with one vice president from each Christian church in the city; also a visiting committee of ladies, the city; also a visiting committee of ladies, selected from each church who will have active work to do. Any lady may become an annual member by the payment of one dollar a year. Any person may become an honorary member by paying five dollars a year at hereafter.

is progressing beyond the expectations of the most sanguine. Many women and girls have found remunerative situations through the employment bureau. Others have obtained shelter and food until employment could be secured. Distressed mothers and little children, deserted by worthless husbands and tathers, have shared the kind benefactions of the home. Destitute, sick woman have been restored to health, and others are receiving the heartiful desertions. the benefits of the hospital department. Home-less old women are there, happy in doing what they can to aid in the duties of the household. Friendless girls are there to be shielded from the temptations of vice and welcomed into the sheltering arms of a Christian home.

Many destitute, wandering ones have been lothed, fed and warmed beneath this kindly clothed, fed and warmed beneath this kindly roof. A superintendent meets the women in the humbler walks of life—the working women in that vicinity, on each Sabbath afternoon in the home for Bible study. The home, with all its work, has been dedicated to God; and not only commends itself to the hearts of all lovers of Christianity, but to every lover of humanity of whotever were a covered. of humanity, of whatever sect or creed

The Pennsylvania Excursion. Mr. J. J. Sprenger's Pennsylvania excursionists passed sthe greater portion of their time yesterday visiting the various points of interests in and about Atlanta. They made the office of Sam'l W. Goode their headquarters, and seemed to be much interested in the farming and manufacturing enterprises of the state. The remainder of the excursion, Mr. Sprenger thinks, was delayed in Washington on account of some misunderstanding with reference to the price of the tickets. He knows of in-stances where some of them failed to get their tickets, owing to a misunderstanding between the officials of the company and the ticket agents. It is just probable, he says, that they may have become disgusted and gone home. Those who are here are merchants, farmers, grocers, furniture men and carriage manufac-turers. Some of them will go to Newton, Greene and Morgan where they will look at certain pieces of property that their attention has been called to. Among the excursionists is Mr. Snider, of the Lancaster, Pa., Free Press, who proposes, while in Georgia, to write letters to his paper, giving his own and the opinions of the members of the excursion of the south. About 4 o'clock in the afternoon, Mr. Goode carried a number of excursionists to the executive department, where they were introduced.

utive department, where they were introduced to Governor McDaniel.

Cut With a Knife. Sam Con bs was given an ugly and bloody wound in the neck by J. J. Moore, a Gwinnett county boy, yesterday. Combs was standing on Line street near Porters alley when Moore came by and asked for a match. Combs said that he had no match and Moore called him a liar. Combs returned the compliment and Moore opened on him with a compliment and Moore opened on him with a knife. The blade was keen and cut a long, ngly gash on Combs's neck. The wound bled quite freely. Combs reported the case to Patrolman Cochran and Moore was arrested. He was given a cell charged with assault with intent to murder.

Three of a Kind. Deputy Marshal W. Y. Carter yesterday brought n J. W. Phillips, James Williams and James Jordan. from Franklin county, for violating the internal revenue laws. They were bound/over by Commissioner Gaston, of Gainesville.

HUNNICUTT'S RHEUMATIC CURE

Will prove to any one suffering from RHEUMA TISM, Lumbago, Sciatica, Gout, Neuralgia or Kid ney Troubles, that it will effect a permanent and speedy cure in every instance.

SOLD BY DRUGGISTS Mr. Albert Howell says: A short time ago I suffered terribly with rheumatism. It was impossible to walk even with crutches. I could not put my foot to the foor. I found no relief from treatment or remedy until I tried Hunnicutt's Rheumatic Cure. Before I had finished taking one bottle I was able to walk comfortably with my crutches. Before I had finished the second bottle my rheumatism was entirely gone. I put my crutches aside and have never felt a twinge of rheumatism since. I am well, and can say my cure is perfect and permanent. It is certainly a wonderful medicine.

ALBERT HOWELL.

CERTAIN CURE Atlanta, Cs., January 6, 1886.—Messrs, J. M. Hunnicutta Co.: I have been a sufferer with kidney troubles for seventeen years, and have been treated by prominent physicians of this state and Alabama.
I have used large quantities of medicines advertised to cure blood and kidney diseases, without receiving the slightest benefit. About six weeks ago I suffered such intense paim—scarcely being able to breathe at times—I concluded to try "Hunnioutt's Rheumatic Cure," and after using one bottle was entirely and absolutely cured, and for the first time in seventeen years I am without the slightest pain, and earnestly recommend all who suffer to give your cure a trial. Yours truly,

Mrs. F. A. Nichol, 382 South Summer street, Nashville, had backache, bearing down, all gone, tired feelings, dizzy head and other female complaints for several years, and was cured in four months by Dr. Wilbur, without being subjected to the embar rassing procedure of an examination.

Miss Laura Henderson, 105 Leonard street. Chattanooga, had an ulcer on her arm six inches long, over three years. She went to eminent M. She also had a terrible case of catarrh, which rendered her breath oftensive. She heard of Dr. Wilbur's great success, and tried him as a last resort before having her arm amputated. The doctor cured her catarrh and healed her arm entirely in two months.
